

Teacher Development Programmes in the United Kingdom

What is EMI?

This 2-week course is designed for academic staff who are using English as a Medium of Instruction (EMI) i.e. teaching their academic subject in the English language. The course covers methodology, techniques and strategies which can be personalised to individual contexts.

CITE has delivered EMI teacher training both in the UK and with our partner universities overseas. We have worked with universities who are planning to introduce EMI to programmes, as well as departments who have already introduced EMI but are now looking to support their academic staff.

Why join the EMI Teacher Development Programme?

- ✓ Become a more effective teacher by developing teaching skills and increasing understanding of teaching methodology.
- ✓ Learn from expert practitioners, informed by the latest research.
- ✓ Enhance your CV and career prospects.
- ✓ Share experiences and network with other teaching professionals from around the world.
- ✓ Access University of Leicester academic resources, such as the library and online journal databases.
- ✓ Experience life in a vibrant university city in the heart of the UK.

Dates

The course dates: 13th - 24th July 2020.

Applications should be submitted by 31st May 2020.

How to apply

Please find our courses, with information on how to apply, as well as about costs, accommodation, requirements and teaching content here:

<https://www2.le.ac.uk/offices/eltu/courses-for-teachers/emi-course>

If you have any questions or would like to discuss a bespoke EMI training programme for your department, please do not hesitate to get in touch.

As a partner institution, it might be possible to arrange an Erasmus-based staff exchange to accommodate the programme and fund your training.

Do you teach English?

While the EMI is designed for all types of courses delivered in the English language, we also offer a specialised English for Academic Purposes (EAP) course. The aims of this two week course are to give English teachers an insight into the world of EAP teaching and to develop their teaching skills in a British university environment.
